The school and the Italian team Group 3

Introduction

We are one of the groups involved in the Erasmus + project. We flew to Italy and visited our Italian Erasmus+ partners between the 11th and the 16th March. In the following slides we would like to tell you about the Italian school, Istituto Tecnico Vittorio Bachelet, the Italian team, how we worked together, how we got along and about our feelings and takeaways.

Istituto tecnico Vittorio Bachelet

The school of the Italian students is named Istituto Tecnico Vittorio Bachelet. We would say that the school is a typical educational environment located in a historical building including a church which serves as a huge hall for various events. Compared to our school, IT Bachelet is bigger and has several buildings in the city. The school offers various programs. Not only have they economics, which is divided to finance, marketing and tourism, they also have science, language and social science.

Vittorio Bachelet students and classes

After visiting the sustainable companies (you will find more details in another part of our Erasmus+ blog) we spent some time in the Italian school. We got involved in a typical lesson – marketing in English. Italian students gave us presentations about local sustainable companies they had visited before our arrival. 3 groups of about 15 students gave details about sustainable approach of several companies in region. Even though this was the first time they presented in English to a foreign audience they did a really good job.

Facts about the Italian school system

The most surprising fact that we learned was that Italians have school on Saturdays. They explained that they don't have a school canteen so they need to go home for lunch and they would not make it for afternoon classes. That is why they have classes on Saturday morning. If we should talk about how Italian students are different from Czech students it would definitely be the relationship between students and teachers. It's well known that the Italians are very social and warm, and they have much friendlier relationships with their teachers compared to our more formal ones.

Our takeaway

Most importantly, we would like to express our gratitude for the great opportunity to work and communicate with the students of the Italian school and learn something about their studies. We learned a lot of new things from this trip, met interesting people and experienced the beauty of Italy. We look forward to meeting the Italian students in Prague in October this year.
